REPORT ON THE
VIDEO ADVOCACY PROGRAM OF THE
HUNGARIAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

HCLU Film, the video advocacy program of the Hungarian Civil Liberties Union, produced 70 films in 2009; 26 were Hungarian and 44 were in a foreign language. The program operates with one coordinator, in close cooperation with the drug policy program coordinator, as the majority of the HCLU films focus on the field of drug policy.

Our international work continues to use the cooperation method that we developed. Beyond attending drug policy conferences and interviewing activists on various issues, the collaboration we do with partner NGOs in other countries allows our films to positively affect their local advocacy efforts. The Eu- ropean Drug Policy initiative, coordinated by the HCLU, provided a perfect framework for filming issues and events transnationally. This has allowed us to make films concerning: the issue of drug tourism in Dutch border towns; the upcoming heroin program in Denmark; the history and failure of strict Swedish prohibitionist drug policies and how they have prevented Stockholm from starting a needle exchange program; the catastrophic HIV epidemic in Russia and the lack of funding for needle exchange programs and; Kyrgyzstan's successful implementation of harm reduction programs.

Our Hungarian language films in 2009 were used to strengthen the HCLU's other programs. With the "HCLU Reports" series, we explained our position on various issues in a manner that is easily understandable. We continued to film the trials of court cases handled by the HCLU, mostly having to do with freedom of information. Our latest Hungarian language film project tackles the human rights issues of Romani people, a new dimension that has recently been added to the HCLU's advocacy work. We decided to broach this topic because of the ever increasing virulence of racism in Hungary. With the support of the Royal Embassy of the Netherlands, we have produced 17 short films on how to fight discrimination for the Office for the Protection of National and Ethnic Minorities \(NEKI\). We have produced our 45 minute long film "Without Rights" on the rights violations that Romani people face in the eastern part of the country. Our work at this part of the country is not yet funded, and we provide the funding ourselves. This film was the main film on the 10th of December, Human Rights Day, on the leading online news portal, Index in Hungary. It received 13176 views until the 29th of December, the writing of this report.

Our films are all available online for streaming and as of this year, also for downloading. Our film database makes it easier to search for HCLU films by category. We continue to use the creative commons Attribution-Non-commercial-Share Alike license. This allows our films to be downloaded, distributed, even modified for non commercial purposes, as long as the derived work properly credits the HCLU and is shared under the same license.

The video sharing sites we continue to use are YouTube (we have a Hungarian and an English profile), Vimeo and the human rights video sharing site, the HUB by Witness.

From this year all our films are downloadable also (we built a database for easier access, it is available yet for the foreign language films). In the back of this document you will find all the download links to our films. Another great development this year was the subtitling of all of our new films in English and Hungarian. This was made possible by YouTube's new subtitle upload function, which also makes it possible to translate the subtitles to any languages while watching the film, using Google Translate. We are not only subtitling our new films, but have also started to subtitle films shot before the YouTube's subtitling feature was introduced.

This year, we were able to purchase a used Sony HVR-Z7 camera that takes more beautiful footage than was possible with our old camera.

We constantly receive very positive feedback on the content and quality of our films. Tens of thousands of people watch our films and comment, share or embed them on their own blogs or websites. According to the feedback, NGOs from all around the world, in Denmark, New Zealand, Great-Britain or the US were inspired by our films to grab a camera themselves and start filming their own advocacy movies. Below are a few comments that we received on YouTube or on Drugreporter, our drug policy website.

” ” I would like to say thank you HCLU for making this and all the other well produced and important videos that you have published. “ “

” ” Thanks to the HCLU for exposing Sweden - absurdly sterile water is also only sold from pharmacies in Sweden if one can provide a doctors prescription! “ “

” ” Great video. Harm Reduction is the word for the world. “ “

” ” Congratulations once again for the excellent quality of the video! “ “

” ” I (heart) the HCLU and ENCOD! Thanks for going to Vienna! “ “

” ” These videos are getting better and better. Such a mood-brightener. It's really inspiring. “ “

” ” This film is a good advocacy material. I strongly believe the concerned persons may visit other neighbouring countries that got success in introducing methadone as a substitute drug... Bangladesh has recently decided to introduce Methadone (Pilot phase) which was one of our long waited dream! “ “

” ” I think Freek Polak has opened a door and we have to do whatever needed to avoid that Costa or anyone else is closing that door again. The fear for drugs is the fear of the none user who is anxious to be confronted with other opinions. So keep up the pressure and thanks to Péter Sarosi and the whole team for increasing television values. “ “

” ” Keep up the good work. Wish I was on that conference... “ “

” ” Keep on fighting! We need Mr. Costa to face the truth. “ “

” ” Keep up you good videos .from Debra Dingeldine in Tucson,AZ yes, your so right. “ “

” ” Excellent Documentary! Greetings from Scotland to Hungary!! :-} “ “

SMOKING WITHOUT BORDERS

Han Polman, Mayor of Bergen op Zoom

The mayor of the Dutch border town Bergen op Zoom announced that he would close down all coffee shops selling cannabis because of the crime and nuisance caused by drug tourists coming from Belgium.

Some reports even concluded that the Dutch coffee shop system proved to be a failure and Dutch drug policy needed to be revised.

The HCLU's video advocacy team decided to visit the Netherlands to get the full story. We interviewed the mayor and learnt that he has no problem with cannabis users or coffee shops in principle – but he is fed up with the 25.000 drug tourists invading his town every week, accompanied by traffic jams and drug runners. We also traveled to the nearby city of Tilburg, where this mayor plans to legalise the large scale cultivation of cannabis.

We spoke with the manager of a coffee shop who explained that coffee shops are integral part of Dutch society and simply could not be wiped out.

The film we produced on this particular situation had 18, 881 views until the 29th of December on Vimeo.

Our main conclusion was that the problems associated with drug tourism are not caused by cannabis use or coffee shops.

The real problem is the illegality of cannabis in neighbouring countries and nothing will be solved by closing down coffee shops.

The real solution to the problem is in the hands of the neighbouring countries:

The effective regulation and control of the cannabis market, in Belgium and other bordering states may not get rid of traffic jams but would put an end to drug running and other crimes associated with prohibition.

In order to facilitate a Belgian change in policy, we asked viewers to send emails to the Belgian Ministry of Justice asking them to consider the regulation and control of cannabis.

HCLU IN ACTION: STOP THE GLOBAL WAR ON DRUGS!

On the 11-12 of March 2009, the United Nations gathered in Vienna to discuss at the High Level Segment of the CND (Commission on Narcotic Drugs) the effectiveness of current drug control policies and to adopt a new Political Declaration on drugs.

Despite tremendous evidence pointing to the failure and unintended consequences of the global drug war, it was an open secret that governments would not break with the old “tough on drugs” approach to new drug policy.

Prior to the meeting, the HCLU launched a campaign to draw attention to the harm caused by the international drug control system. We produced a campaign video to publicize what was happening at the High Level Segment, to highlight 10 years of failed UNGASS goals and to call for their re-evaluation. During our filming in the Netherlands, Kyrgyzstan and Denmark, we collected the views of drug users, scientists and activist from all around the globe, and produced 21 video messages to the participants of the CND in Vienna in 2009. The INPUD - International Network of People Who Use Drugs - conference in Denmark was a very good opportunity to meet drug user activists from all around the world.

The work we did around the CND was helped by WITNESS, an American NGO working extensively on video advocacy. WITNESS not only provided advice and expert reviews of our films but also supported the HCLU with ideas on online advocacy. Our cooperation has been fruitful and an enriching experience.

For the CND in March, the HCLU launched another campaign on the website www.dare-toact.net.

Here, Dutch psychiatrist Dr. Frederick Polak called on viewers to pose the very same question he asked the head of the UN Drug Office, (UNODC) Mr. Costa, several times, without getting a serious answer: "How does (Costa) explain that in the Netherlands, where cannabis is legally available for adults, the levels of cannabis use are on the European average, and much lower than in many restrictive countries, like Britain or the US?"

We have film on three occasions Mr. Costa avoiding both the question and a serious debate: once in Vienna, then in Barcelona, and once again in Vienna.

Our online campaign resulted in hundreds of emails being sent to Costa, and we are still receiving carbon copy emails.

On the 12th of March, the HCLU organized a protest in front of the UN building in Vienna, at the opening day of the CND. Other organizations joined the HCLU's initiative, like the International Network of People Who Use Drugs (INPUD), the European Coalition for Just and Effective Drug Policies (ENCOD), Youth Rise and Students for Sensible Drug Policies. A press conference was held with the speakers in cages to call attention to those incarcerated for drug offences. Earlier, we organized a poster contest on the negative effects of the war on drugs, and the winning pieces of artwork could be seen by all the delegates entering the building. The film we made on the protest was viewed 6543 times, as of the 29th of December.

After the demonstration was over, we entered the UN building as NGO delegates and made four more films inside:

One on the repetition of the unrealistic goal of a “drug free world”:

another, on the exclusion of harm reduction from the political declaration (and how 26 countries stood up and said that they interpret certain parts of the document as harm reduction).

We also filmed the continuation of the Polak vs. Costa debate.

Lastly, we also filmed and published the only subtitled online version of the speech made by Evo Morales, president of Bolivia, in which he chews coca leaves and ask for their reclassification.

These films were viewed 8047 times altogether as of the 29th of December, 2009.

SWEDEN

DRUG-FREE BY ALL MEANS?

Sweden is the only country in Europe that has based its national drug policy on the goal (or as they put it, the vision) of a drug-free society. For many this seems to be an innocent, idyllic dream like “world peace” – but it’s not. Henrik Tham, Professor of Criminology at the Stockholm University, makes this point in our film made in cooperation with the Swedish Drug Users Union.

This “zero-vision” is dangerous because it requires that the goal of total abstinence supersede other goals, values or rights like life or health. Indeed, for some Swedes the vision of a drug-free society is more important than preserving life or reducing the spread of HIV. This explains why Stockholm is the only EU capital with no official needle exchange program.

Our second film on Sweden focused on how this drug-free vision affects those who have problems with their drug use - how they are denied proper treatment in the name of abstinence. We expose in-depth how Sweden came to be the only EU capital city without a needle exchange program, despite enormous evidence that it saves lives.

If a society is trying to get rid of drugs, it invariably means that it will soon try to get rid of drug users. Thus, the war on drugs is always a war on people.

At the end of the film, we call on viewers to write emails to the Swedish Minister of Public Health and ask for an official needle exchange program to be opened in Stockholm.

Combined, both films were viewed 7607 times. We have no information on whether our films had a direct effect, but we received news at the end of 2009 that the municipality of Stockholm finally approved plans for an official needle exchange program.

We also interviewed sex worker activist Pye Jacobsson in Sweden, who spoke about the problems with the Swedish model of criminalizing the clients of sex workers.

We have subtitled this film in Russian and Hungarian, and as of the 29th of December 2009, it was viewed 14029 times.

PIONEERS OF HARM REDUCTION

We made this film in cooperation with the NGO Adilet in Kyrgyzstan, to help their advocacy efforts and showcase their success. The Kyrgyz Republic in Central Asia is situated in a drug trafficking route. The country found itself with a severe HIV epidemic among injecting drug users. Kyrgyzstan has been the first country in the region to introduce science and evidence based harm reduction strategies, like needle exchange programs and methadone maintenance therapy. This film documents how these strategies have proven to be successful in curbing the HIV epidemic in the country. We also wanted to contrast the progressive stance taken by the Kyrgyz republic with the development of drug policy in similar countries: the Russian Federation where methadone maintenance is illegal and Kyrgyzstan, where methadone and sterile syringes are even available for prisoners.

This film was viewed online 10420 times until the 29th of December 2009.

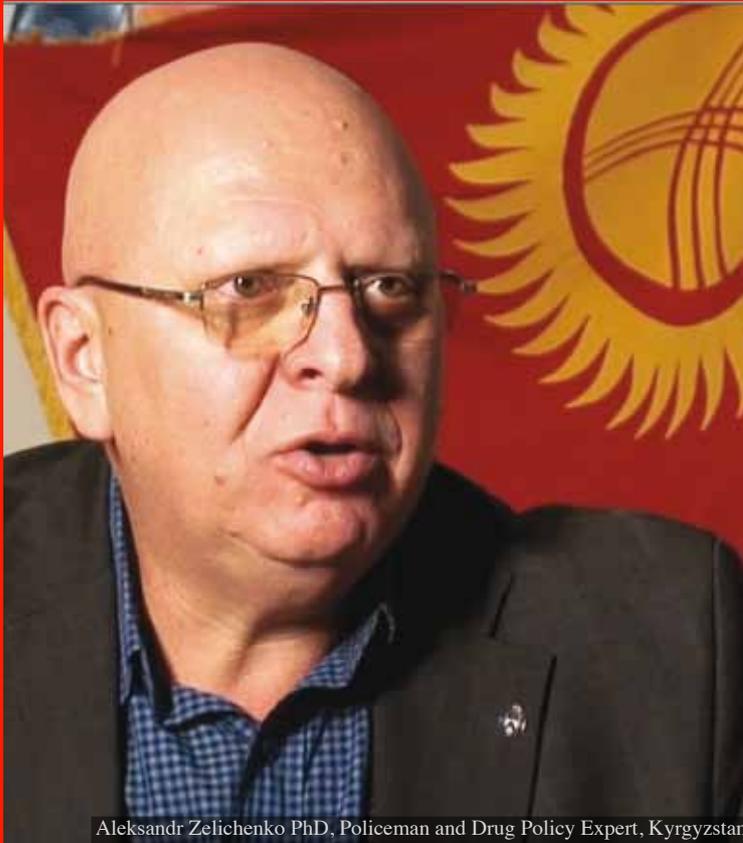

We sent 100 DVDs for Adilet to distribute, and we ourselves distributed 50 DVDs at certain conferences, for example in Moscow.

LAWYERS ON THE STREET

Nanna W. Gotfredsen, "Gadejuristen" - "Street Lawyers", Denmark

When our video team attended the meeting of the International Network of People Who Use Drugs (INPUD) in Copenhagen in November 2008, we filmed the daily activities of the Danish NGO "Street Lawyers" within the framework of the EDPI project.

The Street Lawyers (Gadejuristen) provide a fascinating example of how legal assistance can be offered to street based drug users.

The organization is based in Copenhagen, Denmark, and provides legal aid and clean syringes to the most disadvantaged drug users in the city.

The Street Lawyers fight for a supervised injecting facility in Copenhagen, to protect street users from overdoses and diseases.

Dr. Christian Hyidt MD., Copenhagen Municipal Health Service

Our second film from Denmark focuses on how Denmark finally decided to start heroin maintenance program.

While this type of program has been successfully introduced in several western countries, it still has to fight prejudice and being misunderstood. The Danish program provides heroin under supervised circumstances for those users who did not benefit from any other treatment.

This results in the dramatic decrease in crime, death and illnesses, and their well being greatly improves.

RUSSIA

OFFICIALLY NEGLECTED

Shona Schonning, Eurasian Harm Reduction Network at a press conference in Moscow

The number of people living with HIV/AIDS in Eastern Europe and Central Asia rose to 1.5 million in 2007; almost 69 percent of these infected people live in the Russian Federation. According to UN estimates, more than 60 percent of new transmissions are due to the sharing of injecting equipment.

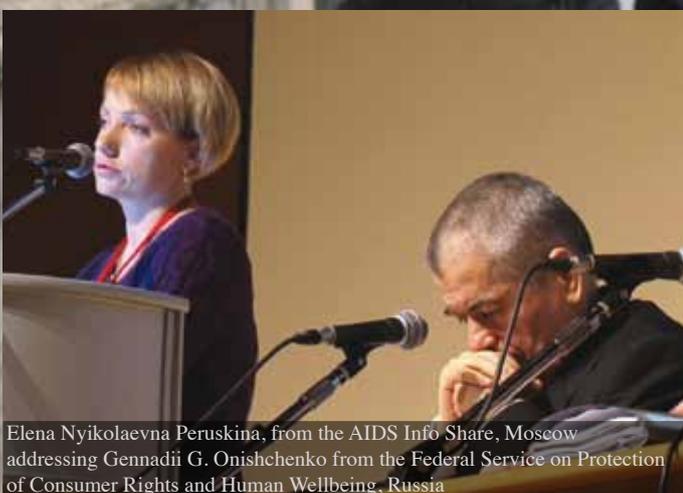

It follows, that international recommendations see harm reduction programs such as opiate substitution treatment and needle exchange programs as the most cost-effective tools to reverse this trend back. Unfortunately, opiate substitution treatment using methadone is illegal in Russia (watch our previous movie on this issue), while needle exchange programs are tolerated.

The needle exchange programs currently running in Russia are funded by the Global Fund and not by the Russian state. The Global Fund spent hundreds of millions of dollars in the past years, on setting up harm reduction programs in Eastern Europe. Recently, it decided that Russia has lost its eligibility for funds since it can no longer be considered a “low income” country, but an “upper-middle” income country.

Although the Minister of health promised in 2008 that the state would begin funding these programs, this did not happen. Programs have started to close down – only in August, 22 needle exchange programs had to close their doors.

Mihail Grishin from Center Podwal, Moscow addressing Michel Kazatchkin from the Global Fund

During the III Eastern European and Central Asia AIDS Conference held in Moscow from the 28th to the 30th of October, Russian NGOs became aware to what extent their government did not support their harm reduction efforts. In light of this, NGOs turned to the Global Fund asking for another two years of financial support. Our video advocacy team attended the conference and produced a film to help these NGOs. Two days after the conference was over we published our film, subtitled in English, on the issue, in which we asked for viewers to support the NGOs' request to the Global Fund. This film was viewed 1598 times as of the 29th of December.

The Global fund did in fact grant the request of the NGOs and extended financial support to Russian programs for an additional two years. According to the NGO representatives who campaigned for this, our film was a great contribution to their success. We consider this a major victory as the health and lives of hundreds of thousands of people were potentially in danger.

On November 1, 2009, International Drug User's Day, activists organized a protest in front of the Federal Drug Control Service (FDCCS) in Moscow, to pay tribute to the memory of people who died of overdoses or drug related diseases. The protesters laid flowers and white slippers (a symbol of death) on the doorsteps of the agency's building in remembrance of the great number of lives claimed by the inhumane Russian drug policy. The peaceful protest was ended by police brutality; five protesters were arrested, detained for five hours, and later were summoned to the court. The footage of the protest was given to us by our Russian partners, which we edited and uploaded. By the 29th of December, 900 people watched this footage.

IN NEW-MEXICO

After the War on Drugs

Reverend Edwin Sanders, Metropolitan Interdenominational Church

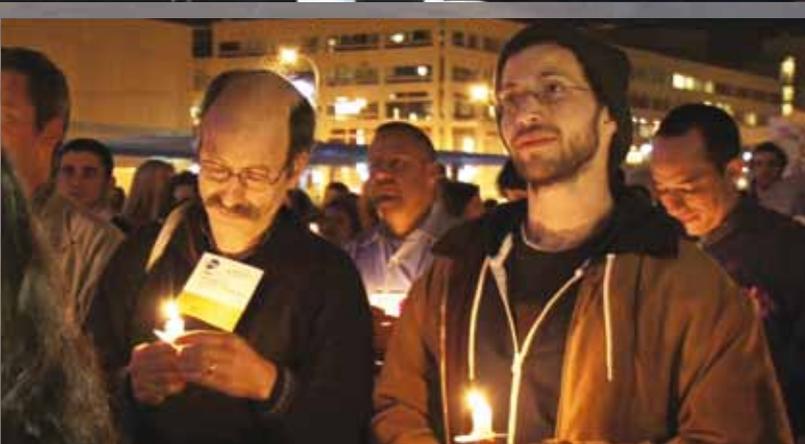

Anthony Papa, Drug Policy Alliance, USA

Ethan Nadelmann, Drug Policy Alliance, USA

Dorsey Nunn, All of Us or None, USA

The HCLU Film team attended and filmed extensively during the Drug Policy Reform Conference, organized by the Drug Policy Alliance (DPA), in Albuquerque New-Mexico. By the second day of the conference, we had already published the uncut opening speech of the DPA executive director, Ethan Nadelmann, and the DPA Board member, Ira Glasser.

One day after the conference, our first film was ready, where we documented a twilight candlelight vigil in remembrance of the prisoners of the drug war. At the vigil, Reverend Sanders pointed out that even if it seems like we stand alone against the whole world in our fight for freedom and justice, this should never make us forget that only one man with a single match is enough to dispel darkness. If you fight against the sinister powers behind the so-called war on drugs, you are indeed a “keeper of the light”.

Medical Marijuana at Harborside Medical Cannabis Center in Oakland, USA

In the second film, we focused on outlining what a post-prohibition world may look like: how would different drugs be taxed and regulated? What are the available models for regulation and control? What lessons can be drawn from the history of tobacco and alcohol and how can we avoid the same problems when we legalize currently illegal drugs?

The Transform Drug Policy Foundation, a London-based think tank, presented its blueprint on the legal regulation of drugs at the conference. We interviewed leading drug policy reformers – such as Ethan Nadelmann, Danny Kuschlick, Mark Haden and Sanho Tree - at the conference to provide answers to the questions raised above.

At the conference, we cooperated with the American Harm Reduction Alliance to produce films on the situation of needle exchange programs in the US and the topic of stigmatisation, which will only be ready in 2010.

HUNGARY

WITHOUT RIGHTS - ROMANI ISSUES

In Hungary, our most popular film was shot about human rights abuses experienced by Romani people in Hungary. The 45 minute long film, that is also subtitled to English is entitled “Without Rights”.

During the aftermath of murders in Tatárszentgyörgy, Péter Juhász and Bence Békés began visiting villages around Ózd to support the Romani people living in the area. With advocacy tools provided by the HCLU, they joined in helping these communities advocate for themselves and fight discrimination more effectively. This film is the first piece documenting their work and revealing the situation they found.

Why would a local government pass a law that forces clubs to close at 10 pm, in an area where the only place open happens to be Romani? How can someone be accused of carrying 700 kg of wood on a bicycle? How can a case be labelled as a false alarm when the whole street witnessed a gun being pointed at a pregnant woman? How can the parents of six children be put in prison for two of their children skipping school? The film deals with such issues.

Since the summer of 2009, the HCLU has become more and more involved with human rights cases involving Romani individuals. The aim of our program is to improve the advocacy skills of Romani communities, offer mediation services in problematic cases and, through strategic litigation, to take up the gauntlet against institutionalized discrimination and magisterial niggling, all of which make the situation of people living in poverty impossibly difficult. Our aim is also to inform the public about the everyday problems and miserable living conditions associated with deep poverty.

The film was published on Index, the main Hungarian online magazine, on the 10th of December, Human Rights Day. It was featured on the main page for a day, and remained the film of the day for several days. It reached 13176 views altogether as of the 29th of December 2009. We have produced 200 DVDs and have begun distribution to partners and other organisations.

With the support of the Royal Netherlands Embassy we produced 17 films for the Legal Defence Bureau for National and Ethnic Minorities \(NEKI\). Of these, one was an introduction film for NEKI, and another film focused on their method for detecting discrimination. In this method, a person belonging to an ethnic group (mostly Roma) and a non ethnic person apply for the same job or go to the same pub. Their experiences are contrasted in order to determine whether discrimination happens or not. In the DVD package and on the YouTube channel, there are 15 additional films: 9 case studies on discrimination, 6 explanations of terms, like discrimination, aggrieved party, compensation etc... and explanations on what to do if you have been a victim of discrimination.

The simplicity of the HCLU report series allowed us to present our position on complex and charged issues in a manner that was clear, concise and well thought out.

The first film was made on why we are against the criminalization of Holocaust denial. The second was filmed on the right to give birth at home: We called attention to the fact that it is a constitutional right but midwifery and other birthing assistance offered outside an institution, is not yet regulated. We have turned to the Constitutional Court to force the Parliament to create appropriate legislation. In the third report film, we highlight the situation of those living with disabilities in closed institutions, and call for a common discussion on the forum of our website to create the disability policy of the future.

On the website we have the video on this call, and extensive background materials. In 2009, we also filmed our court cases and filmed at other events organized by HCLU, like the candlelight vigil in front of the Ministry of Health on World AIDS Day, 1st of December 2009.

14-12-2009 Without Rights
A new documentary film by HCLU on the situation of Romani people in Hungary. Why would a local government pass a law that forces clubs to close at 10 pm, in an area where the only place open at that time happens to be Romani? How can someone be accused of carrying 700 kg of wood on a bicycle? How can a case be labelled as a false alarm when the whole street witnessed a gun being pointed at a pregnant woman? How can the parents of six children be put in prison for two of their children skipping school? The film deals with such issues.

01-12-2009 December 1 World AIDS Day, Budapest
On the eve of World AIDS Day, the HCLU organized a demonstration in front of the Hungarian Ministry of Health to light candles in memory of the victims of AIDS. The demonstration was also to demand that the Ministry of Health and the National AIDS Commission fulfill their mandates as outlined by international documents and the National AIDS Strategy; and to communicate that the present favorable epidemiological situation should not be left to mere luck, but be the result of a well-planned and delivered strategy.
